MAKE APPEAL TO U. S.

Both Austria and Italy Have Asked United States to Take Care of Their Interests in Case

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Rome, May 19.—At the Austrian and German embassies tonight a denial was made of the report that Prince von Bielow, German ambassador, and Baron Macchio, Austrian ambassador, demanded passports or that their departure is imminent.

U. S. Embassies to Serve.
Washington, May 19.—Both Austria and Italy have asked the United States to care for their diplomatic interests in the event of the severance of diplomatic relations. The Washington government has instructed its consuls at Rome and Vienna to be in readiness to do so.

Roumania May Join Italy.
Rome, May 19, via Paris, May 19.—Roumania's attitude regarding the war is being watched with keenest interest as no official announcement has been made as to whether the cordial relations that country and Italy has been transformed into an actual alliance. There undoubtedly is a diplomatic understanding between the two governments.

The green book containing diplomatic documents is said to have shown that Italy's rights will be because of necessity, and during the negotiations with Austria the representative of the dual monarchy apparently had failed to realize that Italy was determined to enter the war if she was unable to obtain satisfactory territorial concessions by diplomatic action. The green book contains also the note of May 4, in which Italy, after summarizing the course of events and emphasizing that Austria's conduct has been contrary to the letter and spirit of the triple alliance treaty, denounced that treaty.

Italy Denounces Treaty.
In explanation of the manner in which the treaty was denounced, it may be stated that on May 4 the Duke of Avarno, Italian ambassador at Vienna, acting under instructions from his government, notified the Austrian minister of foreign affairs that Italy considered Austria's declaration of war against Serbia a violation of the triple alliance treaty. He added that the negotiation started first by Germany and continued by Austria, with a view of giving Italy compensation for maintaining neutrality, had been complete. Austria's offer, both because the Austrian offers were both inadequate and because Italy's situation had become intolerable, Austria made no reply, but continued the negotiations offering additional concessions.

Military Seizes Railroads.
Rome, May 18, via Paris, May 19.—A royal decree under which all railways and stations in Italy are placed under the supervision of the military authorities, is published by the official Gazette. Under the provisions of the decree, military officials are given the power to prohibit suspected persons from traveling on the railways or even approaching the line. All travelers are warned that at certain points they must not look from the carriage window, but keep the shutters closed.

Italy's Decision Awaited.
Vienna, May 19.—According to the Vienna press, no definite indication regarding the decision reached by the Italian cabinet as to Italy's future course has been received from the Austro-Hungarian government. The future course of Italy will be decided in favor of a peaceful settlement of the war under any or all circumstances, but this is believed to be too slight a possibility to justify any optimism.

The Austro-Hungarian government has gone so far in the way of territorial concessions that a peaceful settlement is not seen quite impossible. Italy's attitude here, no doubt, is a factor in the decision. The Italian cabinet appears to be not so much where a basis for the satisfaction of Italian territorial aspirations is found, as whether the Italian government already has determined to enter the war on the side of the allies against Austria-Hungary and Germany.

Important Concessions.
The concessions said high officials in Vienna are greater than far greater than people can imagine. The statement of Count Tisza, Hungarian premier, and Count Andrássy, Hungarian minister, were intended to assure Italian nations that the war was made in the best faith and in no sense an "Indian." One confidence existing is based on the belief that the Salandra cabinet is the only ministry possessing any of the old in the war party and is the only ministry strong enough to enter into negotiations with Austria-Hungary and maintain peace at home.

Additional Concessions.
Rome, via Paris, May 19.—Foreign Minister Sonnino is reported to have informed the council of ministers in his session this evening that offers of additional territorial concessions had been received from Austria.

Kill Rioters at Pola.
Rome, May 18, via Paris, May 19.—Four persons were killed and several hundred wounded by police and Austro troops in quelling the uprising at Pola, according to the Idea Nazionale. Houses of Italian subjects are said to have been sacked by authorities.

REASONS FOR FAILURE OF ARBITRATION.

NEED THREE AGENCIES

Tells Lake Mohonk Conference That Arbitration Must Be Followed by Conciliation and Legislation.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Mohonk Lake, N. Y., May 19.—John Bassett Moore, president of the Lake Mohonk conference, said today that arbitration made "international cooperation" the subject of the address which he delivered at the conference today, and was given close attention in view of the fact that the former counselor of the department of state, Mr. Moore has had much practical experience in handling matters of international concern.

Pointing out that although a world court had been established at The Hague sixteen years ago, the spirit of co-operation has been lacking to support it and make it effective. Mr. Moore discussed some of the necessary steps to secure international co-operation.

Must Regulate Nationality.
"At the present day," he said, "the world is groping about for some way to make it effective. The law among nations is similar to that which exists within each individual state. It is evident that the first condition is the regulation of the conception of nationality. The conception of nationality through a particular national agency, there can be no doubt that this conception directly incites to the transgression of the bounds of law and justice."

Nevertheless, when we come to analyze the conception of nationality, as expounded by the philosophers, we find its principal ingredients are largely made of violence. This statement of the principle that every independent nation has the right to declare war, and having declared it, to assume the right of conquest. Mr. Moore said that this statement of law before there was anything like a reign of law among nations.

"Far more difficult than the statement of the principle to be maintained in the formulation and application of measures to carry it into effect. Here again it is of the first importance to grasp in its details the problem with which we are dealing. The world of the past ten years we have, for instance, often been assured that what the world needs is an arbitration tribunal and an international police to enforce the law. This statement seems to disclose both a misconception of fact, and an incomplete grasp of conditions. The misconception of fact is that the supposition that the world is a lawless place, that the world suffers the disregard of arbitrary awards. In reality, arbitrary awards have been remarkably well observed. The actual problem with which the world is confronted is how to maintain in order the great powers of Europe, if their national armaments were continued on the scale of the past twenty-five years? It is manifest that it would have to be, practically overwhelming, unless it were merely to have the effect of the great armaments of Europe today in involving in hostilities a larger number of men making armed conflict more bloody and more costly.

"The fact cannot be too often or too

LACK OF FUNDS SHOWN

If More Money Is Appropriated a Special
Levy Must Be Made For This Purpose.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Madison, May 19.—Governor Philipp today sent a message to the legislature in which he told the lawmakers that before they ever vote upon another appropriation bill, that they start with personal authorization in excess of special receipts which if not diminished by a repeal, will require a property tax of $8,741,000 next year.

"No action whatever is required to compel the placing of this sum in the tax levy," said the governor. "To reduce that levy will require specific action by the legislature. In other words, if the amounts already appropriated are not reduced from legislative action every dollar that from now on is voted for any purpose whatever, will come out of the property tax and will be fixed in the tax levy by the legislature before it adjourns."

The governor submitted estimates, the result of an inquiry by legislation by accountants covering a period of nearly two months.

"Make an estimate in efficiency in ordinary revenue to meet expenses to be paid out of appropriations for each of the succeeding two fiscal years; add thereto an deficiency for the preceding year, and by bill levy a state tax to cover total."

"No other state tax will meet with my approval or will be made by my commission."

The governor points out that although extensive improvements are authorized by the last legislature, aggregating $1,342,000, none of this money was included in the tax levy.

Premier Asquith Tells House of Commons That Reconstruction of Cabinet Is Now Under Way.

London, May 19.—Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons today that steps were in contemplation which involved a reconstruction of the government.

The reference of the premier to the prosecution of the war was greeted with loud cheering. The prime minister was followed by Admiral Bonar Law, leader of the opposition, who said:

"To End War Successfully.
I think it only necessary to say on behalf of my friends and myself that at the state this has reached our only consideration in regard to further steps to be taken is the sole idea of what is the best method of finishing the war successfully, and we leave out of our minds absolutely all considerations political, and otherwise beyond that. Of course, if such an arrangement would take place, it is objectionable on other subjects will remain unchanged and will be settled when the war is over."

Referring to the possibility of political changes in the government, he said:

"Such a combination would be useless and perhaps worse than useless, except as a means to a combination of the nation—a nation organized from the bottom for the purpose of ending this war."

In connection with the formation of a national government the Star this afternoon says that Baron Fisher may resign, the admiralty and Winston Spencer Churchill may go to the India office.

Pessimism in London.
London, May 19.—England is abstracted by a political upheaval which is expected to end in a coalition government and finds little time to interest itself in war news, but nevertheless a pessimistic situation is causing a feeling of pessimism.

The official announcements do not wholly confirm the pessimistic special dispatches from Petrograd, but they admit the Austrians hold firm along the river San.

The Austrian route in eastern Galicia is not yet complete, according to London information, but the pressure is growing here that the defeat of the Teutonic allies in this section has been severe enough to prevent the complete success of the wholesale offensive movement which they initiated along the eastern front.

Military experts in London are today characterizing the retreat of the Russian army as a masterful victory on the part of the Russians, which must have cost the victors dearly. The Russian offensive in East Galicia stand out today in reality a defensive movement made necessary by the fact that the Austrians constituted a serious menace to the left flank of the Russian armies in Galicia.

Blames Troubles to Miner Officials of
The Colorado Mines

Washington, May 19.—Responsibility for the Colorado coal strike was laid at the door of miner officials of the coal companies directly in touch with the industrial relations commission by Rev. Eugene S. Golds, a Methodist clergyman, and former superintendent of the sociological works of the Colorado coal and iron company. Miner officials in touch with the men were "brutes" and "blasphemous bullies," he said.

Chairman Walsh asked if there were no state officers to protect workers against cruelties at the hands of miner bosses. The state of Colorado is represented in the closed camp, and in some of the open camps by justices of the peace, men who were company men.

Sociological conditions in the camp, the witness declared, were generally worse by saloon associations, and in many cases were disgracefully disbarred. One of the directors of the company told him in Denver a few years ago:

"We might as well confess it; we have not given the miners anything but the saloons."

Cardiff, Wales, via London, May 19.—The British steamer Drumcree, which left Barry yesterday, has been torpedoed in the English channel. Members of the crew were saved.

No Regret Boat to Rescue.
It was on account of the bravery shown by the crew of a Norwegian steamer that passengers and crew of the Drumcree were rescued. It was torpedoed when off the Cornish coast yesterday, but the projectile failed to sink her. She was taken in tow by the Norwegian steamer, but the submarine started in pursuit and the Norwegian cast her off.

A second torpedo finished the Drumcree, who was sinking rapidly when the Norwegian steamer, perceiving her peril, returned and took the passengers and crew.

The steamer Drumcree was built in Sunderland in 1905. She was of 2,667 tons net registered, and 374 feet long. She was owned in Liverpool.

ADMIRAL WM. BENSON
ASSUMES NEW DUTIESFormer Commander of Philadelphia Navy Yard Has Position as Chief of Naval Operations.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, May 19.—Ex-circumnavigator of Africa, ex-commander of a sea rover more or less for twenty-two years, Rear-Admiral William Shepherd Benson, late Capt. Benson, commander of the Philadelphia navy yard, has been appointed chief of naval operations next to the confidence of his superiors, the respect of his equals, and the admiration of his subordinates. Nearly sixty years old, he is known to his intimate friends as "Dear Old Ben," old in this case being a term of affection and not applying to physical appearance. When you meet Admiral Benson you see a man apparently forty-five, tall and with fine carriage, dark hair slightly sprinkled with gray, and with deep set, piercing eyes that show the born leader.

Rear-Admiral Benson's appointment has been received with great satisfaction by both the conservatives and the radicals of the navy. His wide experience in naval tactics and administration has assured the former that he will do nothing that will be to the detriment of the navy, while the latter are confident that he is always progressive to the point of greatest efficiency. Indeed, his well established character for careful, sane, constructive work places him in a position in the navy similar to that held by Brigadier General Hugh Scott, chief of staff of the army. De-

Washing Post, May 19.—The key-note of Rear-Admiral Benson's work will be his appointment as chief of naval operations. It is a position of the greatest importance, and one which he has been well qualified to fill.

His appointment came as somewhat of a surprise to the navy set in Washington where he has been but two months. It is his twenty-two years service. It is interesting to many the Secretary Daniels chose him for that reason, in order to insure the greatest possible amount of cooperation between the new chief of naval operations and the Secretary Daniels, the latter thought it best to pick an officer sympathetic with his naval policy.

There has been nothing spectacular about Rear-Admiral Benson's rise. He has won each promotion by long, steady faithful service and attention to duty. He is a native of South Carolina, the son of an instructor in the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

This appointment is in particular a departure from what is called naval administration by the "swivel-chair" method, in which an officer who has been holding down a position in the department for many years and who cannot, many believe, bring the necessary amount of critical experience to bear on their work. It is believed that the policy of Secretary Daniels is gradually to place in control of the most important divisions of the navy those men who have shown talent in their work at sea and in their commands at naval stations.

SEEK TO TAKE POWER
FROM NORWAY RULERSocialist and Radical Members of Parliament Attempting to Reduce Prerogatives of King Haakon.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Christiania, May 19.—The Socialist and radical members of the Norwegian parliament are making a renewed attempt to reduce the prerogatives of King Haakon. Bills to take away from the king the privilege of conferring decorations, the right to attend the opening session of parliament and to alter the laws of succession to the throne, some of which were defeated three years ago, are to be pressed again.

After the union between Norway and Sweden had been dissolved in 1905 the country voted upon the question of adopting a monarchical or a republican form of government. Norway had been a monarchy for a thousand years and seventy-nine per cent of the people voted to continue that system. When Prince Charles of Denmark accepted the call of the people shared with him the supposition that he could be assured of reigning and working on the conditions stipulated by the constitution. Very soon, however, the Socialist and Radical politicians began to attempt to restrict the King's prerogatives. After they obtained control of parliament in 1915, several bills were debated and voted on but failed to secure the necessary two thirds majority. The King has the right to bestow the Royal Order of St. Olav upon deserving foreigners as a decoration of honor, and this has been a personal right of the King which did not concern the cabinet or parliament. Proposals to take away that right and to prevent the King from attending parliament were defeated.

Bills have now again been presented to abolish the order of St. Olav, and to forbid chiefs of state, accepting decorations, also to forbid the king from attending the opening and closing of parliament. Another measure proposes to take from the throne the prerogative which he holds as head of the Norwegian church of appointing priests, bishops and other church functionaries. Even more sweeping than these bills is one dealing with the succession. If the king should die without an heir, the constitution would elect his successor. This provides that under such circumstances parliament should decide whether Norway is to continue to be a monarchy, and other would make amendments to the constitution possible by a majority vote instead of two-thirds.

There is no dissatisfaction with King Haakon personally in Norway, but the extreme Democrats aim at making the institution of monarchy public. The members of the royal family live with greater simplicity than the heads of most republics. The King and Queen ride in the street cars and bicycle about the country roads, and meet the people on a plane of equality.

PREHISTORIC MACHINES.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

London, May 19.—"This is a war of tricks, machines, and devices," writes an officer of the British General Staff in a letter sent to his home town for publication. "You would be surprised at the prehistoric appearance of some of the machines. We haven't actually fired with bow and arrows yet, but we have come very near it."

"The coolness of the average British soldier is often remarked by visiting officers of other armies," writes the officer. "I remember a man whom I saw yesterday. He had just cooked a tin of prepared food over a brazier in the bottom of a trench. He was very calm, and he was eating his food with a large shell burst just in front of him. Scattering mud, water and stones in every direction. A lump of mud landed with a splash in the midst of the carefully prepared dinner, whereupon the soldier without turning his head or taking any notice of the shell, the shock of which had been pretty severe, remarked, 'Don't mind fighting for Belgium, but I'm hanged if I want to eat it.'"

Germany May Indicate Willingness

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, May 19.—Official information was received here today that the German reply to the American note will not be completed for at least a week, and probably will not reach Washington for at least ten days.

It is known with some definiteness that Germany will indicate her willingness to have her submarines act toward all merchantment just as destroyers or cruisers would give ample time for passengers to leave, providing her passengers and contraband traffic are separated.

The position is looked upon with some favor provided it is suggested as modus vivendi or temporary arrangement and does not invoke the relinquishment by the United States of the right of its citizens to travel anywhere on the high seas on enemy or belligerent unarmed vessels.

There is an insistence on the part of the United States, however, that the principles of law and humanity expressed in its note, must be recognized and admitted by Germany, and any intention to destroy American lives on the Lusitania must be disavowed.

IRISH PICTURES WIN APPROVAL

"Ireland a Nation" Appears at Apollo Theatre Under the Auspices of the A. O. H. and L. A. Last Evening.

The gallant fight that the little island of Ireland has made for her freedom from British oppression was shown in a very clear manner by a cast made up wholly of Irish actors and actresses and portrayed through the medium of the motion picture screen.

The picture illustrated in quick succession the base inactivity of the Lord Castlereagh, who sold the freedom of the Irish parliament for English gold, the indignation of such famed patriots as John Philip Curran, Robert Emmet and Michael Dwyer, the succeeding terrible times, when the British soldiery overran the beautiful island, the execution of Robert Emmet, Dwyer, the successful passing of the Catholic emancipation bill by Daniel O'Connell, the terrible days of famine and emigration to America, the passing of the first land bill through Gladstone by Charles Stewart Parnell, the final ending showing a telegram from John E. Redmond announcing the passage of the home rule bill, which was hailed with loud applause, and the monument raised to the immortal Emmet with his epitaph finally written. And then was shown the beautiful flag of Ireland fluttering in the breeze, an emblem that has stood as an ideal through all the years of oppression.

The beauty for which Ireland is famed the world over could be glimpsed all through the picture. The wonderful hills and glens, the ruins of the ancient churches built by the early monks, the Meeting of the Waters and the Old Weir bridge, the famous Mullcross Abbey and the beautiful Lakes of Killarney, could all be seen. Numerous street scenes showing the activities of Ireland were also shown. Withal, it was a picture that would delight the heart of any Irishman.

It is not surprising that audiences in theatres like the new Strand in New York and the Studbaker in Chicago, sit spellbound through the two hours it takes to the photo-play. The scenes are so vivid, the action so strong, the picturing of the passions of men so true, that one forgets he is watching a picture play. He feels he is right in the streets of Nome, Alaska, living, breathing, absorbing the life and atmosphere of the turbulent days of the gold miners themselves.

Time-Loss in Tuberculosis

In the Journal of the American Medical Association (January 17, 1914) was the following:

"It has been many times stated that in tuberculosis or in the pre-tuberculous stage an increased amount of calcium (lime) is lost, both in the urine and feces. In fact, a demineralization has been thought to be a forerunner of the development of tuberculosis."

"Forced feeding of tuberculosis patients and the enormous amount of eggs and milk once given such patients are not now considered advisable by a large number of physicians who are specializing in the treatment of tuberculosis."

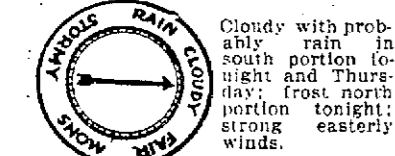

"If tuberculosis is due to a loss of lime from the system, the success of Eckman's Alternative in the treatment of this disease may be due, in part, to the fact that it contains a lime salt so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated."

WALL STREET'S VIEWS.

Dispatches would indicate that Wall Street and the elements which go to make this crooked little street the money power of this country are anxious for some sort of a warlike demonstration against the nation that permitted its submarines to war on the mercantile marine of the world. If it is known the very men who are shouting loudest about the rights of the United States what the United States should do is to realize that this great nation is made up of a cosmopolitan people. That the melting pot of all nations, in fact, a veritable Tower of Babel in language.
While the German population are but one-tenth of our entire hundred odd million people, the leaders of these people have expressed their grief and sorrow over the complications that have arisen, but have assured the public that they will stand behind the president.
President Wilson typifies the American people in his letter to the imperial government at Berlin. Until an answer comes to his carefully worded and well-expressed protest and demands is received this nation must remain quiet. When the formal answer is made, is time for radical action and no other. Meantime to illustrate the opening thought, that of Wall Street seeking to bring about an armed struggle, the following editorial reprinted to show to what extremes some elements would have us go to defend what they call our national honor:

Human law, national and international is a reflection of human endeavor to promote justice. Those who would interpret the history of man must understand laws that are higher than those made by men or nations.

"There are laws in the human heart that at times overlap the laws of human enactment and strengthen arms and hands that would reach out for justice. In such a crisis human organizations are shaken to their foundations; sometimes utterly destroyed."

"When humanity has reached the limit of endurance, a crisis follows.
The patience of the people of the United States is exhausted. A people that stands for democracy and human development in freedom has seen a military autocracy in the heart of Europe organizing and arming for a generation under the guise of self-defense. Then the unbelievable has happened."

"The spiked helmet with the mailed fist has gone forth in blood and iron for conquest. Trampling smaller nations under foot and sounding the ocean depths, it bids defiance to the whole world."

"The challenge is open and bold.
Piracy and murder on the high seas shall be according to Prussian war law. There are no laws; there are no treaties which Germany considers herself bound to respect. All are but scraps of paper."

"There is, therefore, nothing left in this crisis save the higher law; the law of humanity."

"The United States can no longer look upon the war area in Europe as a field of neutrality. The system of German 'kultur,' which means material expansion by organized warfare under a military autocracy has thrown down the gauntlet, not only to the democracy of France and of the British empire, but to the democracy of the world."

vowing the peace of the globe both on land and water. Modern democracy declares the government the servant of the people. The Prussian House of Hohenzollern declares its rule is by divine right and that the people must serve the government.

The bleeding hands and feet of the women and children of Belgium have called for rain for the protection guaranteed by patent bearing the signature and seal of the government of these United States. Treaties and papers of international agreement have now passed as a scroll that is burned. The dead and dying who carried papers of American citizenship and international passport, yet were coldly and foully murdered on the high seas, now call in the name of humanity.

"Shall the war law of Germany prevail on both land and sea?"

ANENT COMMUNICATIONS.

During the past few days the Gazette has received numerous communications relative to matters of public interest. Particularly have these been directed at the present action of the young girl prisoner, now pending in court. Some have been worthy of publication and would prove most interesting reading, but unfortunately they were not signed by the writers.
It is necessary to have the name and address of the writer on each communication. However, this name will not be published unless requested, but for self-protection the Gazette insists upon the signature being attached to the letters. The columns of the paper are open to just criticism of matters of interest, not only of civic or community interest, but of nation or world-wide happenings as well as state affairs. The right to reject unavailable communications or comment upon contributions is reserved by the Gazette. It is unfortunate that the recent articles received were not accompanied by the writers' names so they might have been published. Address all communications to the Editor and be sure and sign them with your name and address so they will be given attention.

LOOKING FORWARD.

Political posters are looking forward to the campaign of next year.
They have already figured it out that Governor Philipp will make the race for United States senator against F. F. Feltz, that Whitte in that case will run for the governorship on the conservative republican ticket, and even suggest that if Philipp decides upon another term as governor that Whitte will run for congress against Cooper, and Senator Platt Whitman, one of the administration leaders in the state senate, will make a similar race against Nelson. Fine talk just now to fill up space. Meanwhile the gentlemen mentioned are giving their best service to the state in the arduous positions to which they have been elected. They are seeking to reform the party pledges of economy, fight iniquitous lobbies, urge the passage of measures necessary to the welfare of the state and doing their duty like men. If future preferment comes to them it will be a reward for faithful services now being performed.

Italy can hardly wait to begin fighting its old enemy, the Austrian, and Austria is ready to defend its honor with shot and shell from points of vantage. Meanwhile the Turks are battling for their last stronghold in Europe against the allied powers, and the Russians are defending a two hundred mile line of battle, with the allies' French-Belgian-English troops gaining inch by inch the German trenches along the western front.
Truly, Europe is at war with a vengeance.

It is with regret that it is learned that F. F. Lewis has resigned from the presidency and board of directors of the Young Men's Christian association. His long connection with this institution has left its imprint upon its success and he leaves the work with the sincere regret of his fellow directors and friends of the association in the city as a whole.

The board of control is waiting for an opinion from the attorney general as to whether they must accept a prisoner committed to a state institution that does not exist except on paper. Meanwhile it is suggested that the friends of the fair prisoner have a bill introduced in the legislature granting her a free pardon for her misdeeds.

Success of the boys' corn growing contest and the good roads movement in Rock county appear assured. They are plans along the right line and should meet with the support of citizens generally in aiding in the great work of making Rock county one of the best agricultural centers in the state.

Evidently the fate of the shoplifters who came to Janesville from Rockford some weeks ago and secured a goodly amount of plunder is not improved any by the dilatory tactics in the punishment of the Bumgart woman.

ITCHY SALT RHEUM

Sometimes Called Eczema—Removed by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Salt rheum is one of the worst and unfortunately one of the most common of all diseases. How it reddens the skin, itches, oozes, dries and scales, and then does this all over again! Sometimes it covers the whole body with inflamed, burning patches and causes intense suffering, which is commonly worse at night.

Local applications may do some good, but they cannot permanently relieve. The disease will continue to annoy, pain and perhaps agonize, until the blood has been purified and the general health improved.

Ask your druggist for Hood's Sarsaparilla, the good old reliable family remedy. It has given perfect satisfaction in thousands of cases. Insist on having Hood's Sarsaparilla, for no substitute acts like it. Get it today.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

We had been discussing obsessions, those strange fears that seize upon one and seem to sap one's common sense and one's powers of reasoning. We had laughed at the obsessions of some of the people whom we know. One man has an obsession on burglars and spends more than he can afford on electrical burglar alarms which are always being set off by mistake and frightening everyone needlessly. Another has an obsession on fire, provides his fireplace with the most elaborate screens, is always fancying he smells smoke and eyes anyone who lights a match within his house anxiously until he sees the burnt match safely deposited in one of the cast iron arrangements liberally provided for the purpose.

One of our group had been laughing most heartily at the various anecdotes related until someone said, "Don't forget Bob, he has an obsession on gas, won't have it in his house."

"Is that so, Bob?" we asked.

"The Blame Stuff Really is Dangerous,"

He nodded. "Yes," he said, "but that's not an obsession. The blame stuff really is dangerous, you know."

I think he still feels that the burst of laughter which followed that naive self justification was uncalled for.

It's the way of the world, isn't it? Your particular anxiety is always something to worry about. The other fellow—ah, that's quite another matter. He is absurd, unreasonable, he has an obsession, if he used his common sense he could get rid of it, but you or I are using our common sense, that's why we feel the way we do about the matter, and people who can't see it as we do are simply blind or foolish.

Each Thinks the Other Has An Obsession.

I know a woman who is extremely apprehensive and nervous about her children. She will never go away without leaving a trained nurse with them, "they have some slight ailment," she calls them "very sick" and altogether she wears herself to a shadow over them.

This woman has a friend who is extremely devoted to an invalid sister. She worries continually about her health and sacrifices herself to her to an extent which has made the latter selfish and exacting.

Now each of these two women thinks the other obsessed. Her own case? Well, that's different, she has good reason to worry, etc., etc.

A Paralysis of the Mental Optic Nerve.

There is no one so blind as the man or woman with an obsession. Obsessions seem to cause a paralysis of the mental optic nerve. What's the cure? Well, a sense of humor keen enough to make you able to laugh at yourself, and the habit of self analysis, are about as great helps as I know, but even these cannot be depended upon when the disease has too firm a hold. The best cure of mental as well as physical disease is prevention. Every time you laugh at someone else's obsession, give yourself the mental once over and make sure you haven't any tendencies that way.

Household Hints

DELICACIES.

New Omelet Souffle—Pound eight lumps of loaf sugar quite coarse and pour over this four tablespoons vanilla essence. Spread sugar on a piece of buttered or waxed paper and leave on a warm corner of gas range, to dry. Take six Jordan almonds, bake until crisp and golden brown color. Then pound them rather coarse, and mix with the vanilla and the sugar. Divide yolks from the whites of four strictly fresh eggs, and put the whites into a basin with two additional whites. Stir into the beaten whites containing the four yolks three tablespoons powdered sugar and beat the mixture with a wooden spoon ten minutes. Add gradually the grated rind of a small lemon. Now put a pinch of salt with the whites of the six eggs.

Whisk to a very stiff froth and stir lightly into the yolks. Butter a mold, pour mixture into it and bake immediately, in a quick oven, ten minutes. Just before it is served, scatter the sugar-vanilla nut mixture over the top. This sounds like lots of work, but after you have tasted it once you won't think so.

Strawberry Cake—Cream one cup white sugar with small half cup butter; add one egg and yolk of another, half cup milk, two cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder. Bake in two layers. Fill the top cup strawberries, crush with a fork, add one cup confectioner's sugar, white of one egg, half teaspoon cream. Cream tartar. Beat forty minutes. If it is placed on the ice several times it will come "stiff" in less time. Put between layers and on top of cake.

all available, use this, inserting in bottle from time to time until the temperature reaches 140 degrees F. If one intends to pasteurize often a thermometer is by far the safest method to use, and one can be bought for the price of twenty-five cents, which is reliable. When this point, 140 degrees F., is reached, turn fire down and try to maintain this temperature for twenty or thirty minutes, a little higher temperature is better than a lower one, for at this point, 140 degrees F., the disease organisms are killed. At the end of thirty minutes place cover on bottle, so water cannot enter, and gradually turn on cold water from the faucet if possible, or set in pan of cold water, changing from time to time until milk is cold.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a young girl and I live out of town. Every morning I go to high school on the car. The conductor is a very sensible young fellow, good-looking and good-natured, and he has appealed to me very much indeed. To tell the truth, I am in love with him. I know I am too young for anything like this and I try to forget him by studying, and in my leisure time I read, write letters, walk and go to my friends, but I cannot seem to forget him. He has a girl whom he whistles to every day as we pass in the car, and if I were of a jealous disposition I would be sorely tempted to tell him, but I am not.

How can I gain his affection now that I cannot forget him by occupying myself with anything else? Or should I keep on trying to forget him, and let him go? He is always gentlemanly and helps me off the car, and seldom fails to look back and smile after the car has started. Please advise me what to do. I do not want to tell my parents, as I fear they will make fun of me.

(2) I have dandruff and oily hair. Please tell me what to do for it.

(3) About a week after I manicure my nails they crack and break. I have tried putting vasoline on them at night, but it does no good. How can I overcome this?

YOURS TRULY.

(1) Almost every young girl is desirous in love with some man. The girl who worships vainly is more fortunate than the one whose hopes are realized, because her love does not lead her into foolish things. There is no respectable way in which you can become better acquainted with the conductor. In time you will cease to love him, but not until other interests enter your life. Read, study and seek the championship of your friends; it will help some. I know that you suffer from an undercurrent of him in your mind, no matter what you are doing. But in time this will go away, I assure you, and you will come out heart-whole and happy.

(2) The following dandruff cure until your scalp is free from it: Boracic acid, one dram; lavender water, two and one-half ounces. Mix, and rub into the scalp every other night.

(3) When the nails break constantly, they are cracked every night in slightly warm sweet almond oil. The liquid may be put into a cup at a depth just sufficient to cover the fingertips. The same oil may be used several times a day, and the fingers must be wiped, but not washed.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl past eighteen years old, and I am going with a fellow of twenty-four. He is a fire fellow and I love him dearly and he loves me. Is he too old for me?

(2) Would you advise us to get married?

(3) No, but I think a little girl of eighteen is wiser to go with friends of her own age.

(4) No. A girl of eighteen, if she is normal, has not considered the serious side of married life, and she is not settled down enough to bear its trials.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young lady and have a young lady friend who is graduating as a nurse this spring. She has sent me a formal invitation to the graduating exercise. Am I expected to send her a present of any kind?

AN INTERESTED READER.

It is not necessary to send a present unless you want to.

Well, Neil dear, I have been to the Scotts' and have told them what Mrs. Ellison is trying to do," said Mrs. Parsons, coming up on the porch where Neil sat sewing, with the baby by her side.

"The baby by her side," Neil received the letter warning them against the doctor and dragging your name in as the cause of the divorce.

"Was it like the one she sent me?" asked Neil, wearily.

"The very same. The Scotts were rightly indignant. Indeed, I had hardly sat down before the daughter handed me the letter to read. We talked it all over. I thought they might be able to suggest something."

"What lawyer has he engaged?" asked Neil. "Anyone here?"

"I don't know. Roger says any sensible lawyer would refuse to take the case, for she has not a single witness that amounts to anything. All she can prove is that the doctor was called to your house frequently, and anybody can see that with a young baby, frequent visits might be very necessary."

I am very glad the county seat is a long distance from here. If only the trial is not made conspicuous in the papers, the talk will die down soon," said Neil with a sigh.

"There is one thing certain," said her friend, encouragingly, "anybody who knows you ever slightly will pay the slightest attention to her lies and you need not care for the opinion of strangers."

"But I do," sobbed Neil. "I can't bear to be a public target for eyes, as if I were a malefactor."

"Pshaw! nobody believes you have done what she says."

"I wish I were sure of that," sobbed Neil.

"She has her maid back, you know. The two are living there with the doctor has gone to Mrs. Brown's to board," continued her friend.

"The maid sent me a note saying as long as Mrs. Ellison wants her she had the first claim. I am afraid I should feel as if the girl were a spy of the enemy. I don't believe I want her."

"It's supper time now, dear. I must be going. Goodbye," and Mrs. Parsons ran down the walk and waved goodbye at the gate.

"The doctor came over to the office and had a long talk with me this afternoon," said Dick that night at the supper table. "He has filed a cross-petition for divorce, and the case will be brought to trial at the next term of court, in about five weeks from now."

"Will we have to go over to Gardner?" asked Neil in a weak voice.

"Oh, yes," answered her husband in a cheery voice. "I will have a big crowd. Mother will be down, and the Parsons, young Mrs. Scott—"

"Have they dragged her in?" asked Neil, agitated.

"Neil went to the doctor and offered to be a witness in her testimony could do any good. There are several witnesses to prove that you are not the first patient she has been jealous of. Ellison says his lawyer thinks it can be settled in two hours."

"Will she stay here after the case is settled?" asked Neil.

"The terms of the alimony will require her to go away, and all money will stop if she begins persecutions by mail, so the town will be rid of her, and that's worth all it costs," said Dick warmly.

Sorry for the Chickens.

Chinese and Japanese do not speak the same language, nor can they be said to have the same religion. Confucianism is the prevailing faith of China, while Buddhism is the chief religion of Japan. Geometry probably had its rise in Egypt, though it was perfected by the Greeks.

APPETIZING MEXICAN DISH.
Mexican Stuffed Peppers—Roast large bell peppers till the skin turns black, then rub off the black skin in cold water. Cut around stem and remove the seeds and coarse veins. For filling: Equal parts chopped pork and beef, and one heaping teaspoon chopped almonds and raisins, for each pepper. Add salt and close end of pepper with a wooden toothpick. For batter: Beat whites and yolks separately, then mix and add a little flour to make thin batter. Have a pan of boiling lard ready; dip peppers in batter, then into lard. Remove quickly and dip again in the batter, then into hot lard and fry to a light brown, keeping the peppers covered with the lard. These may be served with or without a sauce, but the real Mexican dish requires the following sauce: Grind to a pulp the seeds of peppers, one small white onion and two tomatoes; add salt—a trifle, and cook ten minutes. If tomatoes have not much juice, add a little water and small piece of butter. Serve with sauce turned over peppers in deep dish.

CODDLING THE STOMACH.

The So-Called "Scientific" Feeding.

In this 20th century of advancement, people are too apt to listen to new theories and put into practice new-fangled notions of feeding. Not only do adults follow so-called "scientific systems," but they cram down the mouths of their children such scientific soft foods that require no exercise of the digestive organs, and the children are apt to become fragile and their stomachs too weak to take in strength-giving food and be able to assimilate it. This is a noxious condition that no man, woman or child should permit. The muscles of the stomach require exercise just as any other muscles of the body neglect them with too much ease and inaction and you raise a dyspeptic. Use a tonic made of medicinal herbs which will stimulate the stomach into greater activity—a remedy which will do this is one which has stood the test of public approval for over forty years, containing no alcohol or narcotic. We refer to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It arouses the little muscular fibres into activity and causes the gastric juices to thoroughly mix with the food you eat, simply because it supplies the stomach with pure, rich blood. It's weak, impure blood that causes stomach weakness. Get good blood through the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you will have no more indigestion.

Sick people are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential.

Know Yourself. Read all about yourself, your system, the physiology of life, anatomy, hygiene, simple home cures, etc., in the "Common Sense Medical Adviser," a book of 1008 pages. Send to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 3 dimes (or stamps) for a cloth-bound copy.—Advertisement.

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

A Physician's Advice. "I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and say that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh-producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal amount of fat the nutritive process must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strengthening, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back. Caution: While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.—Advertisement.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR
M'CUTCHEON,
Author of "Graustark," "Troxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr
McCutcheon.

I protested, but she was firm. "Every one else in the world has been reading about my affairs, so you must do likewise. No, it isn't necessary to read all of them. I will select the most lurid and the most glowing. You see there are two sides to the case. The papers that father can control are united in defending my action; the European press is just the other way. Sit down, please. I'll hand them to you."

For an hour I sat there in the window absorbing the astonishing history of the Tarnowsky abduction case. I felt rather than observed the intense scrutiny with which she favored me.

At last she tossed the remainder of the bundle unceremoniously into a corner. Her face was aglow with pleasure.

"You've read both sides, and I've watched you, oh, so closely. You don't believe what the papers over here have to say. I saw the scowls when you read the translations that Mr. Poopendyke has typed for me. Now I know that you do not feel so bitterly toward me as you did at first."

I was resolved to make a last determined stand for my original convictions.

"But our own papers—the New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago journals—still voice in a way my principal contention in the matter, countess. They deplore the wretched custom among the idle but ambitious rich that made possible this whole lamentable state of affairs. I mean the custom of getting a title into the family at any cost."

"My dear Mr. Smart," she said seriously, "do you really contend that all of the conjugal unhappiness and unrest of the world is confined to the American girls who marry noblemen? Has it escaped your notice that there are thousands of unhappy marriages and equally happy divorces in America every year in which noblemen do not figure at all?"

Then suddenly she changed the subject. "I have some pleasant news for you," she said. "My mother will be here on Thursday. You will not like her, of course, because you are already prejudiced, but I know she will like you."

"I hope she will like me," I added, feeling that it was necessary.

"She was a Collingraft, you know."

"Indeed?" The Collingraft family was one of the oldest and most exclusive in New York.

"You will like my father," she said. "He loves me more than any one else in the world—more than all the world. He would pay off the count tomorrow if I would permit him to do so. Of late I have been thinking very seriously of suggesting it to him. A million is nothing to my father."

There came a sharp rapping on the door at this instant. "Goodness! You'd think Sherlock Holmes himself was at the door!" she cried.

I went to the door.

"Can you come down at once, Mr. Smart?" Poopendyke said in a voice not meant to reach the ears of the countess.

"What's up?" I questioned sharply.

"The jig, I'm afraid," he whispered. "Good Lord! Detectives!"

"No. Count Tarnowsky and a stranger."

"Impossible!"

The countess, alarmed by our manner, quickly crossed the room.

"What is it?" she demanded.

"The count is downstairs," I said.

"Don't be alarmed. Nothing can happen. You."

"What's up?" "Oh, is that all? My dear Mr. Smart, he has come to see you about the frescoes."

"But I have insulted him."

"Not permanently," she said. "I know him too well. He is like a leech. He has given you time to reflect and therefore regret your action of the other night. Go down and see him."

Poopendyke volunteered further information. "There is also a man down there, a cheap looking person, who says he must see the Countess Tarnowsky at once."

"A middle aged man with the upper button of his waistcoat off?" she asked sharply.

"I—I can't say as to the button."

"I am expecting one of my lawyers."

It must be he. He was to have a but on off."

"I'll look him over again," said Poopendyke.

"Do. And be careful not to let the count catch a glimpse of him. That would be fatal."

"No danger of that. He went at once to old Conrad's room."

"Good! I had a note from him this morning, Mr. Smart. He is Mr. Bangs of London."

"May I inquire, countess, how you manage to have letters delivered to you here? Isn't it extremely dangerous to have them go through the mails?"

"They are all directed to the Schmicks," she explained. "They are passed on to me. Now go and see the count. Don't lend him any money."

"The count was waiting for me in the lobby."

"It is good to see you again, old fellow," he said, with an amiability that surprised me. "I was afraid you might hold a grudge against me. You Americans are queer chaps, you know."

Consummate assurance! I had not touched a drop of anything that night.

"I assure you, Count Tarnowsky, the little tilt, as you are pleased to call it, was of no consequence. I had quite forgotten that it occurred. Sorry you reminded me of it."

"The irony was wasted. He beamed. 'My dear fellow, shall we not shake hands?'"

There was something irresistibly winning about him, as I've said before. We shook hands with what seemed to be genuine fervor.

"I suppose you are wondering what brings me here," he said as we started toward the entrance to the lobby, his arm through mine. "I do not forget a promise, Mr. Smart. You may remember that I agreed to fetch a man from Munich to look over your fine old frescoes and to give you an estimate. Well, he is here, the very best man in Europe."

"I am sure I am greatly indebted to you, count," I said, "but after thinking it over I've—"

"Don't say that you have already engaged some one to do the work," he cried in horror. "My dear fellow, don't tell me that! You are certain to make a dreadful mistake if you listen to any one but Schwartzmuller. He is the last word in restorations. He is—"

I checked him. "I have virtually decided to let the whole matter go over until next spring. However, I shall be happy to have Mr. Schwartzmuller's opinion. We may be able to plan ahead."

A look of disappointment flitted across his face. The suggestion of hard old age crept into his features for a second and then disappeared.

"Delays are dangerous," he said. "My judgment is that those gorgeous paintings will disintegrate more during the coming winter than in all the years gone by. They are at the critical stage. If not preserved now—well, I cannot bear to think of the consequences. Ah, here is Herr Schwartzmuller."

Just inside the door, we came upon a pompous yet servile German who could not by any means have been mistaken for anything but the last word in restoration.

For ten minutes I allowed them to expatiate on the perils of procrastination in the treatment of rare old canvases and pigments, and then, having formulated my plans, blandly inquired what the cost would be.

"I should say not more than 150,000 marks, perhaps less," said the expert, rolling his calculative eye upward and running it along the vast dome of the hall as if to figure it out in yards and inches.

The count was watching me with an eager light in his eyes. He looked away as I shot a quick glance at his face. The whole matter became as clear as day to me. He was to receive a handsome commission if the contract was awarded.

"Nearly $40,000, in other words," said I reflectively.

"They are worth ten times that amount, sir," said the expert gravely.

I smiled skeptically.

"Hohendahl was once offered $250,000, Mr. Smart," he said.

"Why didn't he accept it?" I asked bluntly. "He sold the whole place to me, contents included, for less than half that amount."

"It was years ago, before he was in such dire straits," he explained quickly. A terrible suspicion entered my head. I felt myself turn cold. If the frescoes were genuine they were worth all that Schwartzmuller declared; that being the case, why should Hohendahl have let them come to me for practically nothing when there were dozens of collectors who would have paid him the full price?

"As a matter of fact, Count Tarnowsky," I said, resorting to unworthy means, "I have every reason to believe that Hohendahl sold the originals some time ago and had them replaced on the ceilings by clever imitations. They are not worth the canvases they are painted on."

He started. "Impossible!" he cried sharply.

"By no means impossible," I said calmly, now sure of my ground. "To be perfectly frank with you, I've known from the beginning that they are fakes. Count Hohendahl confessed to me at the time our transaction took place that the frescoes were very recent productions. The originals, think, are in London or New York. I saw guilt in the face of Herr Schwartzmuller. I looked straight into the German's eyes and said, 'Now that I come to think of it, I am sure he mentioned the name of Schwartzmuller in connection with the—'"

"It is not true! It is not true!" roared the expert without waiting for me to finish. "He lied to you! We—the great firm of Zump & Schwartzmuller—we could not be tempted with millions to do such a thing."

I went a step farther in my deductions. Somehow I had grasped the truth—this pair deliberately hoped to swindle me out of $40,000. They knew the frescoes were imitations, and yet they were urging me to spend a huge sum of money in restoring canvases that had been purposely made to look old and dimly in order to deceive a more cautious purchaser than I.

"Moreover, Count Tarnowsky, you are fully aware of all this."

"My dear fellow—"

"I'll not waste words. You are a scoundrel!"

He measured the distance with his eye and then sprang swiftly forward, striking blindly at my face.

I knocked him down.

Schwartzmuller was near the door, looking over his shoulder as he felt for the great brass knob.

"Mein Gott!" he bellowed.

"Stop!" I shouted. "Come back here and take this fellow away with you!"

Tarnowsky was sitting up, looking about him in a dazed, bewildered manner.

At that moment Poopendyke came running down the stairs, attracted by the loud voices. He was followed closely by three or four wide-eyed glaziers who were working on the second floor.

"In the name of heaven, sir!"

"I've bruised my knuckles horribly," was all that I said. I seemed to be in a sort of a daze myself. I had never knocked a man down before in my life.

Tarnowsky struggled to his feet and faced me, quivering with rage. I was dumfounded to see that he was not covered with blood. But he was of a light, yellowish green. I could scarcely believe my eyes.

"You shall pay for this!" he cried. The tears rushed to his eyes. "Coward, beast, to strike a defenseless man!"

His hand went swiftly to his breast pocket, and an instant later a small revolver flashed into view. It was then that I did another strange and incomprehensible thing. With the utmost coolness I stepped forward and wrested it from his hand. I say strange and incomprehensible for the reason that he was pointing it directly at my breast and yet I had not the slightest sensation of fear. He could have shot me like a dog. I never even thought of that.

"None of that!" I cried sharply. "Now, will you be good enough to get out of this house and stay out!"

"Mr. seconds will call on you!"

But the last word in restorations had departed.

Is Familiarity Breeding Contempt?

Or is your long association with the facilities and opportunities this country offers the business man, blinding you to their unique and wonderful value?

S. H. Nahigian, the rug merchant, who was driven to this country at the age of twenty, practically penniless, by the Armenian massacres—says many Americans are so used to having the newspapers make money for them that they don't properly realize what wonderful results they do accomplish—and how absolutely necessary they are to business life.

Read on another page how Nahigian came over and started his first store in St. Louis, according to the Armenian custom of going out personally after his customers.

You'll find it interesting—the experience and viewpoint of this man who had never heard of newspaper advertising, when he realized that through them he could send his message to thousands instead of the few he could reach personally—and that the newspapers brought his customers into his store for him.

From a capital of nothing, he has built up a business of $200,000 a year, selling a luxury. He says advertising has done it.

PUBLIC ENDORSE PLAN

For a fortnight some of the club women of the city have been working on a plan which they believe will

Recently a very nice ladies' room was fitted up in the basement of this building, but few people have become aware of this fact and on account of not being very accessible, it could never be used to any especially by strangers, unaware of its location. Such parties have to climb the outer stairs, wander around the main floor and descend again to the basement. It is not very inconvenient arrangement, but one of the main inconvenience to the librarians and confusion and disturbance in the library room. Also in the basement of the library building is a small room, south room, approximately 14x43, very sunny and pleasant, kept warm in the winter and with the lights available. It has a beautiful hardwood floor and nice woodwork. This is used part of the time by the librarians for a repair room and is further used for a few days each year as a voting place for the third ward. The aforementioned place has been looked upon long time on this room for a long time. It seemed to be ideal both in location and in its possibilities for the purposes of a public rest room. The basement of the building is the only place that an area door could be put in on one side of the front entrance, so that

The Club Women interviewed the Mayor.

The large room is in very good shape at present and will require far less material than it would in an older building. There are some pictures, chairs, tables and bookcases already there, which will be used. The only other thing which can be provided. Most of the equipment of the Beloit Center was donated, and perhaps part of the things that are left over from the center can be donated at once or can be loaned during the summer months till another year. It is hoped to give the women of the city opportunity to use the center in the fishings desired. The interest in this venture need not be confined to the city. Any woman cannot help but see the need for such a room and the ladies of the church societies and the country women who are interested in fishing would probably be willing to help in the equipment of such a room. A partial list of furnishings most needed as suggested by the women are as follows: Curtains, rugs, easy chairs and rockers, a couch or divan, mattresses, two or three cots with pillows, and a few chairs.

CIVIC LEAGUE.
The officers of the Civic League have been in full sympathy with the movement toward securing the library rest room. Their opinion and advice was asked from the first and the commissioners have assured the committee of their good will and co-operation in the undertaking. The matter will be brought before the league at their next regular meeting.

that such a place fills a long-felt want and cannot be spared from the community. So the club women are still selling cook books and realizing whatever they can in a financial way to bolster up the venture. Their running expenses include heating, lights, telephone and many other things, making an item of $50 to $60 per month. But they have a strong, active City Federation of over three hundred members, and of over three

BELOIT CENTER.

There is a subject dear to the heart of every club woman of Beloit and one over which she will wax enthusiastically when it is mentioned and that is their city real room, which they call Beloit Center. During the recent club convention held in this city, it may almost be said to have been the rendezvous of the visiting club women and they kept the hostesses clubs busy explaining the whys and wherefores of the venture. SERVICE IS THE MOTTO OF THE WOMEN'S MOVEMENT OF TODAY

The world belongs to the living and the club women feel the call for service, and respond in greater numbers each year. The needs of their town and the civic work that can be done by a united band of earnest women is being brought before the world in the fiery bones of the study club's long-standings. The dead past lives only in the inspiration which it has given and still gives to those who live and serve.

MAROONS BAFFLED BY PITCHING OF GALVIN

Wisconsin Hurler Lets Chicago Down With Two Hits, Winning Game 5 to 3 at Madison Tuesday.

A pair of swells, one of them a triple in the ninth by Des Jardien, were all that the Chicago Maroons could gather off the delivery of Galvin, premier Wisconsin pitcher at Madison yesterday. As the result, Wisconsin won the game, 5 to 3. Galvin was wild, however, passing ten while Des Jardien walked three batters, and allowed seven hits. Galvin struck out nine and Des Jardien seven men.

Illinois won from Purdue at Lafayette Tuesday, 5 to 3. Purdue played hard, but gave Kaufman poor support in the pinches.

Armour won over Heloit at Beloit yesterday, 7 to 5, thereby capturing the title of the "Little Ave" conference. Beloit scored three runs in the ninth, threatening to take the game, when the Armour hurler, King, tightened his loop, started with four hits for Heloit.

MORRIS MILLER

Manager Bill Donovan of the Yankees expects to pitch an entire American League game this year. What's more, he says he's going to win it. Got to win it, in fact, or lose a wager to Joe Jackson, president of the Baseball Writers' association. Bill declares he will certainly go through with the bet and, what's more, he says he will pitch his game against the Tigers at Detroit. Not just now, but later in the season, when he has rounded into condition. Bill is some what rounded now, but not in condition. "When I was with Detroit," says Bill, "we had a pretty fair team, especially in 1907, when we won the pennant. In midseason we had ten games in a row scheduled with St. Louis, which looked like easy picking. But St. Louis had a pitcher named Ray that McAleer had dug up somewhere in the bushes. He did not have a thing, but he beat us four games. Now if Ray could down Detroit four times, I figure that I can turn the trick once. I know I have more today than Ray had that summer."

Jim Coffey has no serious intention of living for any great length of time on the fame that his recent bout with Al Reich brought to him. Jim is ambitious. He thinks he can whip Jess Willard. He is willing to conquer all the doubtful ones that he is the man who is entitled to meet Jess when Jess is willing to risk his title. "I'll take 'em all on," is the way Jim expresses it. "I can beat any of 'em."

those his fellows. Now Billy (meaning Billy Gibson, his manager) you get the boys and I'll do the rest." Following which Jim was engaged to box at Brighton Beach Sporting club Decoration Day against any man whom the club can secure.

The New York Yankees will probably play before one of the strangest galleries that ever saw a baseball game on July 4. Captain T. L. Russell, part owner of the team, has received an invitation to pit his men against the Sing Sing prison team on that date, and the captain indicates he will accept. Early in the season the captain turned all the old Yankee uniforms over to the prison team, which is said to be a really formidable aggregation. Criminals of all types comprise the team, and if the Yankees play in the prison yard on July 4 it will be a gala occasion. All of the prisoners in good standing will be permitted to see the game, and the chances are the umpire won't be the only robber on the field.

Broken noses from divers causes are quite the thing. Tree, Peritt and Herzog have had the olfactory organ damaged in that manner.

Kabot, whom the Cubs have been carrying for a season or two without doing much except to relief-pitch, is coming across in good style this year.

Those fans who are finding Lajoie wanting in comparing him with Eddie Collins may note that Larruping the plate the other day, while Collins was blanked the four times he was at bat, Lajoie is away ahead of Eddie in batting thus far in the infant season.

Connie Mack is looking for a third baseman. He says so himself. "No, I haven't found him yet," said Connie. "Not just as soon as I do I'll have him out there."

The ultra in esprit du corps to our way of thinking is for a man on the bench to yell, "Nice swingin', old boy!" when the batter strikes out.

Happy or Brave. When you cannot be happy, you can be brave. There are things nobody can enjoy especially, aches, pains, disappointments, unkindnesses, and things of that sort. Nobody expects that you boys and girls can be just as happy over your troubles as you are over your blessings. But that does not excuse you for fretting and whimpering. Just as soon as things go wrong. If you cannot be happy, you can be brave.

There is no place you can dispose of any thing as quickly and cheaply as through a classified ad. Try it and be convinced.

BROKEN BONE AIDS MITCHELL IN BOUT

Milwaukee Lightweight Gets Popular Verdict Over Wolgast, Who Breaks New Bone—Scotty Gets Draw

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Milwaukee, May 19.—Ritchie Mitchell, the light-hitting but extremely clever Milwaukee boxer, stepped into the first division of lightweights last night when he gave Ad Wolgast, untitled veteran, a neat lacing last night in ten rounds. Wolgast broke a bone in his left hand, showing him running true to form, and Mitchell piled on a point victory by his speed and punching ability. Mitchell poked so many blows at the former champion that Ad made no pretense of blocking them, but let the Cream City favorite hit with all his might and aim on rushing.

Young Scotty and Kid Mahoney showed real action in their six round go, which ended in a draw. Scotty put up a game and rugged scrap, and Mahoney had a hard time in evading punishment.

Ritchie in Draw.

Boston, Mass., May 19.—A twelve round bout between Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion of America, and Mattie Baldwin of this city, ended in a draw Tuesday night. The champion forced the fight constantly during the early rounds and Baldwin was at a loss for defense. But after the sixth round the Boston man assumed the aggressive and landed blow after blow on Ritchie.

Memphis, Tenn., May 19.—Johnny Griffiths of Akron, O., won the decision over Joe Mandot of New Orleans in an eight-round bout here Tuesday night.

FIED PIPER ENDS CAREER

Quite Rat Catching When He Earns Enough Money to Buy a Boat.

Galveston, Tex.—Charles Bertolina, the Galveston Fied Piper, has turned in his badge and will not be seen catching rats along the water front and the beach for some time. Charles is the champion rat catcher of Galveston. For the past several months he has been taking the rodents at the rate of 2,000 per month.

For this service he received the regular price paid for rats, and in addition was given a bonus of $10 provided he caught as many as 1,000 in thirty days.

When Charles began his career as rat catcher he said he would quit when he had made enough money to buy a boat and a gasoline engine. Recently he made the purchase, and then appeared at the health office and laid down his commission.

The latest record made by Charles was 1,028 rats in 16 days. For these he was paid at the rate of eight and ten cents each and given a bonus of $10.

OLIVE OIL—Under the Pure Food Law all oil made from olives is pure olive oil, yet there is as much difference in olive oil as there is in butter.

Cheap olive oil is made from olives that, through cause of decay, insects or storms fall to the ground. Sound, healthy olives stay on the trees until ripe, like our apples. They are then gathered, the oil pressed without heat. This is virgin olive oil. The second pressing is obtained with steam and hot water, which is known as fine table oil. The rich flavor and medicinal properties are found only in the virgin oil which is of a greenish-yellow color. It is very nutritious, used in nervous diseases is a mild laxative, has a great reputation as a remedy for stones in the bladder, and is a skin food, and a complexion beautifier through its action on the liver. The supply of this virgin oil is very limited. It is quickly bought up for medicinal purposes and found only in drug stores. Mr. Fennig, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist, personally tests our olive oil. You are therefore positive of obtaining the true virgin oil imported direct from Southern France. We sell it at 40c on our hair pull, in a 16 oz. bottle. Get it at our store, The Badger Drug Co., Milwaukee & River streets. The Drug Store that makes a specialty of Drugs.

FOR WOMEN—CANES! IT'S THOUGHT TO BE CLEVER NOW; PARASOLS FOR MEN?

This Is Humane Week. Humane Sunday, May 23

The setting aside of one Sunday a year in behalf of the antiscruelty movement is not a new one. For years England has had animals' children's Sundays which are very generally observed throughout the kingdom. Last year more than five thousand clergymen preached special sermons on topics relating to animals and many more devoted one service in whole or in part to kindness to children. In this country many Sundays are devoted to special observances and Humane Sunday has been given more or less attention. Last year a state-wide campaign was conducted in Pennsylvania and a large number of clergymen preached special sermons or made particular mention of the work of the antiscruelty movement.

As the result of a resolution passed at the last meeting of The American Humane Association it was decided to plan for a general observance of Humane Sunday throughout the United States.

This comes next Sunday, May 23. Several local posters will make the occasion of a special antiscruelty sermon.

The "Tribute to a Dog" was the plan that Senator Vest made for the man whose faithful dog had been killed in malice by an enemy of the owner. Senator Vest demanded that $500 should be paid by the dog-killer to the man whose dog he killed. So moved were the men to the jury by Senator Vest's address, that they not only inflicted the $500 fine, but some of the men wanted to hang the man that killed the dog.

RUSSIAN CITY RIGA
GREAT TRADE CENTER

Washington, D. C., May 18.—Riga, the most ultra-Western town in the whole Muscovite Empire, a city of merchant princes, of bustling warehouses and miles of crowded docking, of victorious Teutonic architecture and cosmopolitan organization, with a hurrying, tense business life that finds its counterpart in New York and Hamburg, lies near the head of the Gulf of Riga, a few miles northeast of Mitau, or just back of the struggling Russo-German lines in the perity and poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry winds blow, and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will lick the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journeys through the heavens.

When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journeys through the heavens. When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journeys through the heavens.

Prayer of a Horse.
To Thee, My Master I offer my prayer.—I need water and care for me and when the day's work is done, provide me with shelter, a clean dry bed and a stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort. Talk to me. Your voice means as much to me as the reins. Let me sometimes, that I may serve you the more gladly and learn to love you.

Do not jerk the reins and don't strike, beat or kick me when I do not understand what you mean, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I fail to do your bidding, see if something is not wrong with my harness or feet. Examine my teeth when I do not eat. I may have an ulcerated tooth and not in my head in an unnatural position or take away my best defense against flies and mosquitoes by cutting off my tail.

And finally, Oh my Master, when my useful strength is gone, do not turn me out to starve or freeze, or sell me to some cruel owner to be slowly tortured and starved to death; but do thou, my Master, take my life reward you here and hereafter. You may not consider me irreplaceable, I ask this in the name of Him who was born in a stable. Amen.

Baltic Provinces. Riga is a great commercial city. It stands third among Russian seaports, and second among all the ports upon the Baltic Sea, where commercial cities have been growing and building for centuries. The city is 363 miles southwest of Petrograd, and is filled with the spirit of modern business. It is a main gateway into vast Russian hinterlands, and is, probably, the most up-to-date city to be found from Vladivostok to Liban.

merchants of the thirteenth century laid the foundations of its commercial renown. It was founded in 1201, and many German colonists soon found their way to the new city, attracted thither by the many commercial privileges granted by its founder. Riga became a powerful, flourishing member of the Hanseatic League, the great merchant trust of the Middle Ages. With Hamburg, Bremen, Lubeck, Stralsund, and scores of its fellow-banded cities, Riga grew in wealth and trade connections; boats from all parts of the world ran in and out of its river harbor, and it enjoyed the grand development of a German "free city."

"Near the middle of the sixteenth century, Riga passed into the power of the King of Poland. The headlong Gustavus Adolphus, of Sweden, brought up in his course of conquest with a shock before its walls in 1601, and only after a long hard siege, was he able to take the city. Riga passed to the control of the Russian in 1710, and has since played an important part in the development of the mighty northern empire.

"Riga has the appearance of a German port. The older part of the town looks like a medieval German town, while new Riga might be Bremen. It has none of the happy-go-lucky Slavonic air about it, and, so, for the tourist it is disappointing. Before the war, German was the language of its business, and German was the idiom of its streets and homes. Official Riga was Russia, and, as Riga is the seat of the Governor-General of the Baltic Provinces, this official element was of much significance.

"For the most part, Riga is a very modern city. Its older buildings have been torn down to make way for structures more up-to-date, more suited to the prosperity of a business city. It is situated on the River Neva, ten miles above the mouth of the Gulf of Riga, and it is bound to the Baltic by canals. Riga has lined many of its avenues with modern villas and palaces. As an example of the city's growth, it may be mentioned that Riga erected more than fifteen hundred new business and apartment buildings during a recent year and that most of these buildings were equipped with elevators, open plumbing, vacuum cleaning, central refrigerating and steam heating plants.

"A strong and varied industry has grown up in the port city. Machinery, railway cars, lumber, leather, candles, tiles, glass, tobacco and other products are turned out in its numerous factories. The annual value of the articles manufactured in Riga exceeds $30,000,000. As an industrial center, it has been becoming more and more prominent year by year, and its future seems to be one of an almost unlimited promise.

"The average value of Riga's exports is well over $35,000,000. Its imports total about $40,000,000 each year. The exports include cereals, flax, flaxseed, eggs, lumber and butter. Its chief imports are machinery, cotton, coal and groceries. It has a thrifty, well-to-do population of more than 360,000."

KING CHARLES I. WILL BE ADDED TO BRITISH CALENDAR OF SAINTS.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
London, May 18.—The name of King Charles I. of England is to be added to the Church of England's Calendar of Saints, if a resolution passed by the lower House of Convocation of the Province of Canterbury receives the required sanction from Parliament. Resolutions of the Convocation have no binding power until they have been legalized by the House of Parliament or unless they have been made under Royal License. The attempt to canonize Charles I. has been made repeatedly. Those advocating such a move see in the king's death on the scaffold nothing but a martyrdom for the Anglican church and for parliamentary government. Their opponents urge that the king merely met the just deserts of a life of political trickery, lying and absolutism. For many years during the early eighteenth century the date of his execution, January 30, was set apart for observances and sermons in memory of the "Blessed Martyr King Charles."

Wins Test Over 40 Cars

Result of the great Yale University Sheffield Scientific School Test. Of the forty automobiles tested at the famous Sheffield Scientific School laboratory the Maxwell stands first in economy of Gasoline consumption.

MECHANICAL ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT
SHEFFIELD SCIENTIFIC SCHOOL
YALE UNIVERSITY

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT
May 1st 1915.

The Biever Motor Car Company,
1079 Chapel Street
New Haven, Conn.

Gentlemen:-

I am enclosing report of test of your Maxwell automobile recently made in our laboratory.

I should like to add the following comments:

1. RELIABILITY OF TEST.

A preliminary test was made on April 19th, using a new car which was rather stiff. The showing was so good that we decided to make a second test. This was made on April 30th, using same car. On this test, the car showed less stiffness and the performance was better than on the first car. The second test was supervised by our most careful experts, and the results, I believe to be perfectly reliable.

2. MILEAGE.

The efficiency of the Maxwell automobile as indicated by the number of miles on a level road, is exceptionally high. This mileage record is better than that of any one of forty automobiles tested in our laboratory to date.

3. MOTOR PERFORMANCE.

The efficiency of the motor and carburetor as indicated by the pounds of gasoline used per hour per horse-power at rear tires, is exceedingly good, and indicates very perfect carburetor action over the whole range of speed and load. This record like that on mileage per gallon, is the best one that we have had.

Very truly yours,

E. H. Lockwood
